

INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS

Policy

Instructional materials other than textbooks are important for student learning. They include, but are not limited to supplemental reading and reference materials for classroom libraries and school libraries, audiovisual materials, real objects (models, mathematics manipulative, etc.), and software and internet-based programs. The Board believes that schools should be provided with these resources to the extent that financial conditions allow.

The Board delegates the selection and acquisition of these materials to the Superintendent and/or a designee. Decisions regarding the selection and acquisition of these materials shall be based on these criteria:

1. Be rich in the content deemed essential by Connecticut's Frameworks and Torrington curricula;
2. Stimulate understanding and appreciation of the literary, aesthetic, and socio-ethical values of our society;
3. Develop students' abilities to think critically;
4. Accurately present the achievements and accomplishments of individuals and groups from all ethnic and racial backgrounds and both sexes;
5. Ensure that students' educational experiences do not discriminate based on race, age, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, or disabilities; and
6. Provide for the special needs of individual students and groups of students.
7. Be compatible and aligned with curricula, textbook content and equipment.

The administration shall develop processes for the selection and acquisition of these materials to ensure quality of materials and equity of educational experience. It shall also develop a process for addressing challenges to the instructional materials in this subsection.

Exceptions to Provision of Materials

The Board of Education does not provide special project materials or personal clothing worn for physical education or other athletic activities.
